92 Points - It is a rich, vibrant wine, with fine texture and a lengthy finish. The predominance of Sauvignon Blanc allows you to enjoy it now, but I believe it will improve within the next five years. It has 13.9 percent alcohol. It might turn out to be Dry Creek Vineyards' finest white wine. Just a small quantity of the 2017 Mariness was made. About two-thirds was barrel-fermented in French oak for 10 days, and was released in November, 2018. It is already sold out at Dry Creek Vineyard's winery, but you can find it in some restaurants and retail stores, particularly in California.
